

PARTICIPANT BIOGRAPHIES

Taiwan after the 2024 Elections

Project on Taiwan in the Indo-Pacific Region 2023 Annual Conference

May 23-24, 2024

HOOVER INSTITUTION, STANFORD UNIVERSITY

Dr. Christina Chen is Assistant Research Fellow in the Division of Chinese Politics, Military and Warfighting Concepts at the Institute for National Defense and Security Research in Taipei, Taiwan. Her research interests include politics, political economy, state-society relations in China; and Taiwanese public opinion regarding military and security policies. She is also Adjunct Assistant Professor in the Center for General Education at Tunghai University in Taiwan. Dr. Chen holds a BA in political economy from the University of California, Berkeley, a Master of Pacific International Affairs (MPIA) degree from the University of California, San Diego, and a PhD in political science from the University of California, San Diego.

Dr. Yi-Ling Chen is an Associate Professor in the School of Politics, Public Affairs, and International Studies at the University of Wyoming, USA. She has participated in the housing movement in Taiwan since the “Snail without Shell” movement in 1989. Her research is on neoliberalism, urban social movement, gender, housing, and urban development in Taiwan. Her publications are mostly about housing and urban development in Taiwan from political-economic and feminist perspectives. She edited a book in 2019, Neoliberal Urbanism, Contested Cities and Housing in Asia (The Contemporary City) by Palgrave Macmillan. Her recent research compares housing policies, policy mobility, and financialization in East Asia, the USA, and the Netherlands. She holds bachelor’s and master’s degrees from National Taiwan University and a PhD in Urban Planning and Policy Development from Rutgers University.

Dr. Min-Hua Chiang is an international political economist with an interest in fundamental macroeconomic theories and geopolitical-economic interactions between countries in East Asia and the United States. She has written three single-authored books: Post-Industrial Development in East Asia: Taiwan and South Korea in Comparison (Palgrave Macmillan, Singapore, 2018), Contemporary South Korean Economy: Challenges and Prospects (World Scientific, Singapore 2017), and China-Taiwan Rapprochement: The Political Economy of Cross-Strait Relations (Routledge, London 2016). She is also the editor of The Political Economy of North Korea: Domestic, Regional, and Global Dynamics (Lynne Rienner Publishers, Boulder, Co, USA, 2022). She was a research fellow and economist at The Heritage Foundation in Washington, D.C., and a senior research fellow at the East Asian Institute, National University of Singapore. She previously held research positions at the Institute of International Relations, National Chengchi University, Taiwan External Trade Development Council, and the Commerce Development Research Institute in Taipei. She received both her Diplôme d’études approfondies (DEA) and PhD in economics from Université Pierre Mendès-France, now part of Université Grenoble Alpes (avec la mention: Très honorable avec félicitations du jury) and her Masters in International Business Economics from Katholieke Universiteit Leuven in Belgium.

Dr. Christy Yachi Chiang holds a bachelor’s degree in Law from National Taiwan University, LL.M in CyberLaw from Leeds University(UK), and PhD from Durham University(UK). She began her academic career in 2012 as a faculty member of IP Law Graduate Institute at Shih Hsin University, then moved to IP Graduate Institute at National Taipei University of Technology, and now she is teaching IP laws and technology laws modules in the Ocean Laws and Policies College at National Taiwan Ocean University. Dr. Chiang has published regularly on IP laws and internet policies, with a particular focus on the intersection of law and technology. She has field experience in corporate governance acting as a board director, and she is often invited to give expert testimonies in the Legislative Yuan, including recently on the governance of digital platforms, online disinformation and cyber security. Dr. Chiang has been teaching and lecturing extensively and is often featured as an IP and tech law expert in various media outlets.

Dr. Larry Diamond is a senior fellow at the Hoover Institution and Mosbacher Senior Fellow in Global Democracy at Stanford's Freeman Spogli Institute for International Studies. For most of the past two decades he has led or co-led Stanford and Hoover research programs on Taiwan's democracy and security, and he has co-edited several books on Taiwan and China. He has authored six books and edited or co-edited some fifty others on the causes of democratic success and failure and global democratic prospects. For 32 years he served as founding co-editor of the Journal of Democracy, and in May 2022 he was honored by the National Endowment for Democracy with its Democracy Service Medal. He was a visiting scholar at the Academia Sinica in Taipei during 1997–98.

Dr. Lauren Dickey is currently the Senior Manager, Geopolitical Intelligence and Integration at Harman International Industries. She is also a Senior Associate (non-resident) at the Center for Strategic & International Studies (CSIS). Previously, Lauren served from 2020-2024 as the senior advisor for Taiwan policy in the U.S. Department of Defense. In this capacity, she led the development and implementation of all elements of the U.S.-Taiwan defense relationship for the Department and in partnership with the interagency. Prior to her position in DoD, Lauren was a research scientist focused on Chinese military issues at the Center for Naval Analyses (CNA). Lauren holds a Ph.D. in War Studies from King's College London, an M.A. in International Studies and Diplomacy from the School of Oriental and African Studies, and a B.A. in Asian Studies and Chinese from the University of Oregon. She is currently a term member at the Council on Foreign Relations, an advocate for young women in national security through Girl Security, and an accredited figure skating coach.

Dr. Elizabeth Economy is the Hargrove Senior Fellow at the Hoover Institution at Stanford University. From 2021–2023, Economy served as a senior foreign advisor (for China) in the Department of Commerce for the current administration. Economy was previously at the Council on Foreign Relations, where she served as the C.V. Starr senior fellow and director for Asia Studies for over a decade. Economy is an acclaimed author and expert on Chinese domestic and foreign policy. Her most recent book is The World According to China (Polity, 2022). She has published articles in foreign policy and scholarly journals including Foreign Affairs, Harvard Business Review, and Foreign Policy, and op-eds in the New York Times, the Washington Post, and the Wall Street Journal, among others. Economy is a frequent guest on nationally broadcast television and radio programs, has testified before Congress on numerous occasions, and regularly consults for U.S. government agencies and companies. In June 2018, Economy was named one of the "10 Names That Matter on China Policy" by Politico Magazine. Economy received her BA with honors from Swarthmore College, her AM from Stanford University, and her PhD from the University of Michigan. In 2008, she received an honorary doctor of law degree from Vermont Law School.

Adm. (Ret.) James O. Ellis Jr. is the Annenberg Distinguished Fellow at the Hoover Institution, where he also co-chairs the Global Policy and Strategy Initiative and the Project on Taiwan in the Indo-Pacific Region. With Larry Diamond and Orville Schell, he also leads the Hoover Institution–Asia Society Working Group on Semiconductors and the Security of the United States and Taiwan. As a carrier battle group commander, he led contingency response operations in the Taiwan Strait in 1996. He served as commander in chief, Allied Forces, Southern Europe, and led US and NATO forces in combat and humanitarian operations during the 1999 Kosovo crisis. He concluded his distinguished 39-year career in the US Navy by serving as commander of the US Strategic Command. Prior to joining Hoover, he served as president and CEO of the Institute of Nuclear Power Operations. He is a member of the National Academy of Engineering.

Dr. Joe Felter is a research fellow at the Hoover Institution and William J. Perry Fellow at the Center for International Security and Cooperation. From 2017 to 2019, Felter served as US deputy assistant secretary of defense for South Asia, Southeast Asia, and Oceania. There he was the principal advisor for all policy matters pertaining to development and implementation of defense strategies and plans in the region and responsible for managing bilateral security relationships and guiding Department of Defense (DoD) engagement with multilateral institutions. At Stanford, Felter is codirector of the Empirical Studies of Conflict Project and coauthor of Hacking for Defense, a defense innovation–focused academic curriculum he helped develop and pilot at Stanford, sponsored by the DoD and taught at more than 30 universities across the country. His previous academic positions include director of West Point’s Combating Terrorism Center, assistant professor in the US Military Academy’s Department of Social Sciences, and adjunct associate professor at Columbia University’s School for International and Public Affairs. He received a BS from the US Military Academy at West Point, a masters in public administration from the Harvard Kennedy School of Government, a graduate certificate in management from the University of West Australia, and a PhD in political science from Stanford University. He is a graduate of the Singapore Armed Forces Senior Service College and was a US Army War College Fellow at the Hoover Institution.

Dr. Douglas B. Fuller is an Associate Professor in the Department of International Economics, Government and Business at Copenhagen Business School. His research focuses on the intersection of East Asian politics, technology policy, corporate technology strategy and comparative political economy. He is the author of Paper Tigers, Hidden Dragons: Firms and the Political Economy of China’s Technological Development (OUP 2016, 2019), editor of two volumes on Hong Kong’s innovation system and technology flows between the US, China and Taiwan, respectively, and numerous articles.

Mr. Ryan Hass is the director of the John L. Thornton China Center and the Chen-Fu and Cecilia Yen Koo Chair in Taiwan Studies at Brookings. He is also a nonresident affiliated fellow in the Paul Tsai China Center at Yale Law School. Hass focuses his research and analysis on enhancing policy development on the pressing political, economic, and security challenges facing the United States in East Asia. From 2013 to 2017, he served as the director for China, Taiwan and Mongolia at the National Security Council (NSC) staff. In that role, he advised President Obama and senior White House officials on all aspects of U.S. policy toward China, Taiwan, and Mongolia, and coordinated the implementation of U.S. policy toward this region among U.S. government departments and agencies. He joined President Obama’s state visit delegations in Beijing and Washington respectively in 2014 and 2015, and the president’s delegation to Hangzhou, China, for the G-20 in 2016, and to Lima, Peru, for the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation (APEC) Leaders Meetings in 2016. Hass also served as a Foreign Service Officer, including postings in U.S.

Embassy Seoul, Beijing, and domestically in the State Department Office of Taiwan Coordination and Korean Affairs.

Dr. Adele Hayutin is Annenberg Distinguished Visiting Fellow at the Hoover Institution. She is a business economist specializing in comparative international demographics. Her 2022 book New Landscapes of Population Change: A Demographic World Tour illuminates the divergent changes ahead for the world, its subregions, and individual countries, and demonstrates the urgent need for strategies that address these momentous shifts. Hayutin received a BA from Wellesley College and holds a master's in public policy and a PhD in economics from the University of California–Berkeley.

Dr. Kai-Ping Huang is Associate Professor of Political Science at National Taiwan University and the Co-PI of the Asian Barometer Survey. Her research interests include party systems, formal institutions, and democratization focusing on East and Southeast Asia. Her work has appeared in the Journal of Democracy, Comparative Politics, Journal of Contemporary China, Social Indicators Research, and several edited volumes. She holds a bachelor's and master's degree from National Chengchi University, another master's from Uppsala University, and a Ph.D. in government from University of Texas at Austin.

Dr. Gidong Kim is a Postdoctoral Fellow at the Walter H. Shorenstein Asia-Pacific Research Center (APARC) as Korea Program Postdoctoral Fellow. He holds a Ph.D. in Political Science from University of Missouri, as well as both a M.A. and a B.A. in Political Science from Hankuk University of Foreign Studies. He studies comparative political behavior and economy in East Asia, with particular focus on nationalism and identity politics, inequality and redistribution, and migration in South Korea and East Asia. His work is published or forthcoming in journals including Journal of East Asian Studies, Journal of Ethnic and Migration Studies, Asian Perspective, Korea Observer, and Social Science Quarterly.

Dr. Yujen Kuo is Director and Professor at the Institute of China and Asia-Pacific Studies of National Sun Yat-sen University, Taiwan. He is also Vice President at the Institute for National Policy Research, INPR, and also the leader of Global Risk Assessment Team, GRAT at INPR. He has served as an advisor at Taiwan's Mainland Affairs Council since 2016. He is also an advisor to the Chinese National Association of Industry and Commerce, CNAIC (Taiwan). He is also the President of Taiwan Society of Japan Studies, TSJS since 2019. Dr. Kuo's main research interests include Japan's defense industry, U.S.-Japan alliance, Cross-strait relations as well as security issues in the Indo-Pacific region.

Dr. Christina Lai is an associate research fellow in the Institute of Political Science at Academia Sinica, Taiwan. She is also an adjunct faculty in Global Security Studies at Johns Hopkins University. Dr. Lai received her Ph.D. in international relations from Georgetown University, and she was a post-doctoral fellow from China and the World program at Princeton University. She is interested in U.S.-China Relations, Chinese Foreign Policy, East Asian politics, and Qualitative Research Methods. Her works have appeared in the Politics, International Politics, Political Science, Journal of Contemporary China, Pacific Review, International Relations of the Asia-Pacific, Asian Survey, and Asian Security. Her research projects were supported by the International Studies Association, Global Taiwan Institute, Georgetown University, and American Political Science Association. Her policy-related works and commentary have appeared in the NATO Association of Canada, the Washington Post, Bloomberg, and BBC News. Dr. Lai's research projects were supported by the International Studies Association, Global Taiwan Institute, Georgetown University, and the American Political Science Association.

Lt. Claude A. Lambert is currently a Visiting Scholar at the Center for International Security and Cooperation at Stanford University. He is a Strategic Plans & Policy Officer and a U.S. Army War College Fellow. Previously he served as the J35 Future Operations Division Chief in the National Space Defense Center (NSDC), under Joint Task Force-Space Defense, a 2-star level functional component command of United States Space Command. Before joining the NSDC, Claude was a Strategic Planner at Army Materiel Command (AMC). While at AMC, Claude was competitively selected for a 1-year operational assignment to serve as the Strategic Advisor and Ministry Development Officer in the Office of the United States Security Coordinator for Israel and the Palestinian Authority, U.S. Embassy Jerusalem. In this capacity, he was responsible for developing U.S. security policy in support of the Palestinian Authority Ministry of Interior and the Palestinian Authority Security Forces. Lieutenant Colonel Lambert is a Level III Joint Qualified Officer and received an M.S. in technology intelligence with a counterproliferation concentration from National Intelligence University, an M.S. in peace operations policy from George Mason University, and a B.S. with honors in history and biology from Eastern Michigan University.

Dr. Thung-hong Lin is a research fellow at the Institute of Sociology, Academia Sinica, and the former director of the Center for Contemporary China at Tsinghua University (Taiwan). His research interests include social stratification, political sociology, and sociology of disasters. He received the Golden Tripod Award (National Book Award in Taiwan 2012), the Wu Ta-You Memorial Award (National Young Scholar Award in Taiwan 2015), and the Fulbright Scholarship for 2023-24. He is the Stanford-Taiwan Social Science fellow at the Center for Advanced Study in the Behavioral Sciences for 2023-24.

Dr. Dinsha Mistree is a research fellow at the Hoover Institution, where he manages the Program on Strengthening US-India Relations. He is also a research fellow in the Rule of Law Program at Stanford Law School, where he teaches courses on state-building and global poverty. Dr. Mistree studies the relationship between governance and economic growth in developing countries. His scholarship concentrates on the political economy of legal systems, public administration, and education policy, with a regional focus on India. Recent and forthcoming scholarship includes a co-edited volume examining the state of India's democracy (with Larry Diamond and Sumit Ganguly), a series of studies of Indian legal reform and economic development (with Erik Jensen), a comparison of government regulation in India's hardware and software industries, a project on the regulation of food adulteration across South Asia, one of the largest quantitative studies of management practices in Indian higher education, and a series of education-focused experiments with Indian students. His other work has appeared or is forthcoming at Brookings, Stanford Law Review, Social Science and Medicine, Public Administration Review, and Comparative Politics. Dr. Mistree holds a Ph.D. and an M.A. in Politics from Princeton University, along with an S.M. and an S.B. from MIT.

Mr. Charles Mok is a Research Scholar at the Global Digital Policy Incubator of the Cyber Policy Center at Stanford University, a member of the Board of Trustees of the Internet Society, and a board member of the International Centre for Trade Transparency and Monitoring. Charles served as an elected member of the Legislative Council in the Hong Kong Special Administrative Region, representing the Information Technology functional constituency, for two terms from 2012 to 2020. In 2021, he founded Tech for Good Asia, an initiative to advocate positive use of technology for businesses and civil communities. As an entrepreneur, Charles co-founded HKNet in 1994, one of the earliest Internet service providers in Hong Kong, which was acquired by NTT Communications in 2000. He was the founding chair of the Internet Society Hong Kong, honorary president and former president of the Hong Kong Information Technology Federation, former chair of the Hong Kong Internet Service Providers Association, and former chair of the Asian, Australasian and Pacific Islands Regional At-Large Organization (APRALO) of ICANN. Charles holds a BS in Computer and Electrical Engineering and an MS in Electrical Engineering from Purdue University.

Mr. Orville Schell is the Arthur Ross Director of the Center on U.S.-China Relations at Asia Society in New York. He is a former professor and Dean at the University of California, Berkeley's Graduate School of Journalism. Schell was born in New York City, graduated Magna Cum Laude from Harvard University in Far Eastern History, was an exchange student at National Taiwan University in the 1960s, and earned a Ph.D. (ABD) at University of California, Berkeley in Chinese History. He worked for the Ford Foundation in Indonesia, covered the war in Indochina as a journalist, and has traveled widely in China since the mid-70s.

Ms. Yun Sun is a Senior Fellow and Co-Director of the East Asia Program and Director of the China Program at the Stimson Center. Her expertise is in Chinese foreign policy, U.S.-China relations and China's relations with neighboring countries and authoritarian regimes. From 2011 to early 2014, she was a Visiting Fellow at the Brookings Institution, jointly appointed by the Foreign Policy Program and the Global Development Program, where she focused on Chinese national security decision-making processes and China-Africa relations. From 2008 to 2011, Yun was the China Analyst for the International Crisis Group based in Beijing, specializing on China's foreign policy towards conflict countries and the developing world. Prior to ICG, she worked on U.S.-Asia relations in Washington, DC for five years. Yun earned her master's degree in international policy and practice from George Washington University, as well as an MA in Asia Pacific studies and a BA in international relations from Foreign Affairs College in Beijing.

Dr. Arzan Tarapore is a Research Scholar at the Center for International Security and Cooperation, Freeman Spogli Institute for International Studies, Stanford University. His research focuses on Indian military strategy and regional security issues in the Indo-Pacific. Prior to his scholarly career, he served for 13 years in the Australian Defence Department in various analytic, management, and liaison positions, including operational deployments and a diplomatic posting to the Australian Embassy in Washington, DC. His academic work has been published in the Journal of Strategic Studies, International Affairs, The Washington Quarterly, Asia Policy, and Joint Force Quarterly, among others, and his policy commentary frequently appears on platforms such as Foreign Affairs, the Hindu, the Indian Express, The National Interest, the Lowy Institute's Interpreter, the Brookings Institution's Lawfare, and War on the Rocks. He earned a PhD in war studies from King's College London, an MSc from the London School of Economics, and a BA (Hons) from the University of New South Wales.

Dr. Kharis Templeman is a research fellow at the Hoover Institution and program manager of its Project on Taiwan in the Indo-Pacific Region. He also teaches a regular course on Taiwan politics in the Center for East Asian Studies. A political scientist by training, he writes and speaks frequently about cross-Strait relations and Taiwan politics and policy issues. Dr. Templeman has edited three book volumes: Taiwan's Democracy Challenged: The Chen Shui-bian Years and Dynamics of Democracy in Taiwan: The Ma Ying-jeou Years (both with Larry Diamond and Yun-han Chu), and Electoral Malpractice in Asia: Bending the Rules (with Netina Tan). His other research has been published in Comparative Political Studies, Election Studies, Ethnopolitics, Journal of Democracy, International Journal of Taiwan Studies, and Taiwan Journal of Democracy, along with several book chapters. He has also written articles on Taiwan policy issues for the Brookings Institution, Atlantic Council, Foreign Affairs, Taiwan Insight, War on the Rocks, and The Diplomat. He holds a BA from the University of Rochester and a PhD in political science from the University of Michigan.

Dr. Kiyoteru Tsutsui is the Henri H. and Tomoye Takahashi Professor and Senior Fellow in Japanese Studies at Shorenstein APARC, the Director of the Japan Program at APARC, a senior fellow of the Freeman Spogli Institute for International Studies, and Professor of Sociology, all at Stanford University. Prior to his appointment at Stanford in July 2020, Tsutsui was Professor of Sociology, Director of the Center for Japanese Studies, and Director of the Donia Human Rights Center at the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor. Tsutsui's research interests lie in political/comparative sociology, social movements, globalization, human rights, and Japanese society. His research on the globalization of human rights and its impact on local politics has appeared in American Sociological Review, American Journal of Sociology, Social Forces, Social Problems, Journal of Peace Research, Journal of Conflict Resolution, and other social science journals. His book publications include Rights Make Might: Global Human Rights and Minority Social Movements in Japan (Oxford University Press 2018), and two co-edited volumes Corporate Social Responsibility in a Globalizing World (with Alwyn Lim, Cambridge University Press 2015) and The Courteous Power: Japan and Southeast Asia in the Indo-Pacific Era (with John Ciorciari, University of Michigan Press, forthcoming). Tsutsui received his bachelor's and master's degrees from Kyoto University and earned an additional master's degree and Ph.D. from Stanford's sociology department in 2002.

Dr. H.-S. Philip Wong is the Willard R. and Inez Kerr Bell Professor in the School of Engineering at Stanford University. He joined Stanford University as Professor of Electrical Engineering in 2004. From 1988 to 2004, he was with the IBM T.J. Watson Research Center. From 2018 to 2020, he was on leave from Stanford and was the Vice President of Corporate Research at TSMC, the largest semiconductor foundry in the world, and since 2020 remains the Chief Scientist of TSMC in a consulting, advisory role. He is the founding Faculty Co-Director of the Stanford SystemX Alliance – an industrial affiliate program focused on building systems and the faculty director of the Stanford Nanofabrication Facility – a shared facility for device fabrication on the Stanford campus that serves academic, industrial, and governmental researchers across the U.S. and around the globe, sponsored in part by the National Science Foundation. He is the Principal Investigator of the Microelectronics Commons California-Pacific-Northwest AI Hardware Hub, a consortium of over 40 companies and academic institutions funded by the CHIPS Act. He is a member of the US Department of Commerce Industrial Advisory Committee on microelectronics.

Dr. Tsung-Tsong Wu just completed his term as Minister without Portfolio and the Minister of the National Council of Science and Technology in Taiwan, where he oversaw the development of the Tsai administration's technology policy. He first served in government from 2006-2008 as the deputy minister of the National Science Council, and later returned to the cabinet in 2016 as Minister of Science and Technology, and then in 2022 assumed the leadership of the renamed National Science and Technology Council. After leaving government, he retains an affiliation as Professor Emeritus at the Institution of Applied Mechanics at National Taiwan University. He holds a BS in civil engineering from National Taiwan University, and master's and doctoral degrees in theoretical and applied mechanics from Cornell University.

Dr. Wei-Ting Yen is an Assistant Professor in the Government Department and the Mellon High Impact Emerging Scholar at Franklin and Marshall College in Pennsylvania. She is also a Public Intellectual Program fellow at the National Committee on U.S.-China Relations and an associate editor for Asian Politics & Policy. Dr. Yen is a political economist whose research focuses on governance and welfare state development in Asia. Her first research theme studies the micro-level foundation of welfare states in nascent democracies in Asia and pays close attention to the role of economic insecurity. This line of research is based on her dissertation, which received an Honorable Mention for the John Heinz Dissertation Award from the National Academy of Social Insurance. The second research theme studies the political economy (at both macro- and micro-level) of COVID-19 governance in Asia. Dr. Yen's works have appeared in Governance, Public Opinion Quarterly, Journal of East Asian Studies, Social Science Quarterly, etc. She holds a Ph.D. in political science from The Ohio State University.